Motiones are either in keeping ground, or changeing ground, and are either of the whole or of a part: Keeping ground, when everie one move in his proper place, as in faceing: Changeing ground, as in Countermarch and wheeling: The motion of a part is as in doubleing, closeing, and opening files and ranks, where some move and some stand still, And first of keeping ground and faceing being standing in order.

Of Faceing.

When yee are commanded To face to the right hand, stand firme with the left legge, and fall backe with the right legge, and so yee are faced to the right hand, As yee were, bring forward againe that same right legge, and place it where it stood firt.

When yee are commanded to Face to the left hand, bring forward the right leg, and so your face v ill be to the left hand, As you were, bring your right leg to the former situation.

When you are commanded to face to the reere by the right hand, hold firme your left legge, turning upon your left heele: Draw back your right legge, till your face bee to the reer. As you were. Turn upon your left heele, and bring about your right legge.

When you are commanded to face to the reere by the left hand, turne on your left heele, and bring forward your right legge, till your face bee to the reere: As you were; Turne on your heele, and bring back your right legge.

The motion of a part is doubling ranks and files, &c. Doubling of ranks serve to enlarge and strengthen the length of the battell, doubling of files to strengthen the deepe of the battell.

Of doubleing of Ranks.

When you are commanded to double your ranks to the right hand, the second rank doubleth to the first, the fourth to the third, the sext to the fift, and so foorth every one of these stepping up to the right side of his leader, with three steppes beginning with the left legge, stepping up on the right hand, with the right legge, and then bringing bringing up the left legge: As you were, returning by the left hand; Also with three steppes to your owne place.

When you are commanded to double your rankes to the left hand, step foreward as to the right: As you were, but returne by the right hand.

Next, ranks are doubled by bringers up, when men are more perfectly trained: that is, being ten rankes: the left rank doubleth by the right or left hand to the first rank, the ninth to the second, the eight to the third, &c. Or ranks are doubled by middle-men, when the last five rankes of ten double up to the first five through the voide that is betweene the files: And being commanded againe As you were, returne againe to their owne place.

Of doubling files, or strings.

Vhen you are commanded to double your files to the right hand, the right hand file standeth still, and the next file unto it, each man steppeth in behinde his side-man: first, turning about the face to the right hand, setting foreward the right legge steppes foreward, with their left legge behinde their side-men on the right hand, bringeth up their legge, placing their bodie in a right line behinde their leader, As you were, They must turne about their face, moving first their left legge, and thus with three steps recover their station.

Militarie instructions.

When yee are commanded to double your files to the left hand, the files that formerly moved, stand, and the other come in behinde them, turning your face about, beginning your motion with their left legge with three steppes, and being commanded, As you were, returnes by the right legge.

Of Counter-march.

Vhen yee are commanded Files to the right hand counter march, then all the file-leaders together at one instant steppe forward with the right legge, and bringing about their left legge, turne their bodie to the right hand, and so marche down thorow the files, till they come to the place of the bringers up or last ranke, all that follow the file-leader, must not offer to turn, before they have come up to the place of the file leaders, and every follower must remarke and keep that distance with his leader which hee had before they began to counter-march: As you were: steppe forward with the right legge, and cast about the left legge to the right hand, and so march back to your place.

Files Counter-march to the left hand, steppe forward with the left legge, bringing about the right legge, turning your body to the left hand, and march down as the former. As you were, step forward with your left legge, cast about the right legge to the left hand, and so march march back to your place: Other kindes of counter-march is not fitte.

Closeing, and opening of Ranks.

VV Hen yee are commanded to close your rankes, the first ranke standeth still: the second cometh up, and closeth to the distance commanded, either three foote, or close order: the rest of the ranks move up, and close to the same distance.

When yee are commanded to open your rankes, the first ranke standeth still, the rest fall backe towards the reare: the second taketh its distance, and standeth still, so the third till all have got their places.

Closeing, and opening of Files.

VV Hen yee are commanded to close your files to the right hand, the right hand file standeth, the second file to it faceth about to it, and steppeth forward, till it have taken the distance commanded, so doth the rest in order, each after other.

If yee be commanded to close your files to the left hand, the left hand file standeth still, and the rest close to it, as they did to the right hand.

Militarie instructions.

If yee be commanded to close your files to the middle, if yee be ten or six in ranke, the two middle files take their distance, the rest face to them, and the nearest to them take first their distance, and so the rest in order: But this is little needfull; the other two may serve.

When yee are commanded to open your files to the right hand, the left hand file standeth still, the second to it openeth, and all the rest in order, till yee come to the right hand.

When yee are commanded to open your files to the left hand, the right hand file standeth still, and openeth as formerly to the left hand.

When yee are commanded to open files to both the hands, the two middle files open to their just distances, so presse on the rest neareste to them, till all have opened to the distance commanded, and open by stepping sideways, pressing with their shoulder their sideman.

Of wheeling, or the great turne.

When yee are commanded the great turne to the right hand, yee must first close your files to that hand, whereto yee are to turne, even to close order, and close up your rankes to the same order: Then the Corner-file-leader on the right hand standeth still in his place, as the fixed foote of a Compasse, moving with the left legge about, turning on the right foot fixed, his sideman moveth more, and so alwayes the more, the further they are are removed from him, every follower keeping his leader, and in every ranke their sideman, The further they are from the right side, they will make the larger turne, untill the front be where the right flanke was: And being commanded the great turne to the reere by the right hand, haveing now your front where your right flank was, may keepe the same order as at first, till your faces be at the reere. When yee would reduce them: As they were, even to the place where they were first, yee must wheele them just about to the said first place: Then opening their files and rankes, they are just as they were: yee may do just so when yee are commanded to make the great turne to the left hand, onliethey do at the left hand, as the other did at the right hand before; but this motion is seldome used, and would be performed when your men are perfite in all their other motions.
